Owners say it's worth it to spend a little extra on the Felco F-2 Classic Manual Hand Pruner, and many say they'll never buy another brand when it's time to tame small trees and shrubs. They sing the praises of this 8 1/2-inch pruner for its ability to cut through branches up to an inch thick without jamming or dulling the blade. The Felco F-2 has hardened steel blades, a forged aluminum handle and an adjustable adjustment. The rubberized handle has shock absorbing pads to keep the work comfortable, and reviewers say it does so effectively. Some recommend other Felco models for smaller hands, especially the F-6 - or those with common problems that will appreciate the rotating and ergonomic handles of F-7 and F-8 prunes. Another favorite feature is a sap groove that helps prevent sticking. The cropper is backed by a lifetime warranty. Although there are cheaper garden knives on the market, reviewers say the Nisaku Japanese Hori Hori Grave Tool is worth the small splurge due to a durable, 6 1/2-inch stainless steel blade that slices through the ground with ease. Experts with garden tool review say it will stand up to any kind of abuse, even getting lost in bad weather. Users love the versatility of Hori Hori, which they say is exceedingly effective at eradicating even the toughest weeds. Its slightly concave shape also makes it useful for easy planting, dividing flowers and transferring small plants, while others even use it as a hunting and fishing aid. Features include a vinyl plastic cloak with a belt loop, a sturdy wooden handle and measurements on the knife itself that help users track ground depth. The Wilcox Stainless Steel Garden Trowel earns raves from users for being almost indestructible, even after years of potting, planting, and light digging. Although many gardeners love the versatility of the largest 14-inch trowel, it is also available in nine, 10 and 12 inches for more delicate tasks such as weeding near delicate plants. Each of them is backed up with a lifetime guarantee. Experts with The Sweethome attribute Wilcox's trowel life to its single-piece steel construction, which leaves no joints to break or rust. But in addition to being durable, it is also very effective and can even be used instead of a soil knife while maintaining its skill at more digging-intensive jobs. Users agree, saying it is sharp enough for effective digging. The also like it that is easy to grab grasp and practical leather wrist loop. Buyers insist that Bully Tools 82515 14-Gauge Round Point Shovel is the last shovel gardeners will ever have to buy because it is durable, versatile, and efficient enough for almost any uses. It is also American made and backed by a lifetime warranty. Users say Bully 82515 stands up to even heavy tasks like moving large boulders, removing tree stumps and digging deep trenches. The i-beam construction makes it particularly robust, allowing users to put more pressure on the blade without fear of breakage. The shovel is just over 59 inches long, with a 48 1/2-inch reinforced fiberglass handle. A good spade can help gardeners slice through soil and roots better than a shovel because of the flat, straight, slightly sharpened blade, and users say Fiskar's 46-inch Steel D-Handle Square Garden Spade is no exception. Reviewers agree, saying it makes edging and other tasks a breeze. Fiskar's D-Handle has a 14-gauge hardened steel blade and an 18-gauge steel shaft, which users say helps it cope with a hard work dish, and a powder-coated finish keeps rusting at bay. It's backed by a lifetime warranty. Reviewers say the large handle and teardrop-shape axle are both easy to grip, but some warn that the handle may eventually come loose because it is attached with just a single screw. Users say Black and Decker Steel Fan Rake is a large size for cleanup spaces like tight flower beds or under dense bushes, where regular rakes are just too big and cumbersome. This rake is compact at only 5 inches wide and lightly squeaks under shrubs and through tight garden rows. With its flexible fan-shaped teeth, the rake grabs a lot of dirt but won't harm vulnerable plants, reviewers say. They also love the molded comfort-grip handle, which they say lives up to its name and feels good in the hand. The powder paint finish is stainless, and Black and Decker back the rake with a three-year warranty. The Stratus RG202 Long-Term Professional Rain and Snow Gauge is made to standards specified by the National Weather Service, and the owners say that makes for a reliable instrument for both home and professional use. In fact, the meter is guaranteed exactly to 1/100th of an inch. Users can measure both rain and snow with stratus RG202, which is made of a weatherproof polycarbonate. Reviewers say it's easy to get an accurate number with this well-designed meter, which consists of a 1-inch inner tube and an overflow cylinder that allows the collection of up to 11 inches of rain. The meter is about 5 by 5 by 14 inches and comes with a bracket that provides easy fastening and removal for users who install it on a post. If you live in a wooded area, a high quality garden rake is a must-have in your tool shed. Razor-Back 24-Tine Steel Rake may not look so special, but it's designed for comfort and performance, and reviewers can't say enough good things about it! Razor-Back Rake can be used to in autumn or to remove dirt from your farm or garden. It boasts 24 steel tins connected to a special head designed to keep teeth from getting loose. Rake's flexible coil spring allows for a smooth raking action so you won't struggle when you clean up your yard, and 9 padded grips will ensure your hands don't cramp up. Razor-Back Rake's handle is 51 long and it is made of fiberglass, which is stronger than a standard wooden handle. If the impressive specs and reasonable price don't convince you to buy this tool, just take a look at rake glowing reviews. Users say Razor-Back 24-Tine Steel Rake is more efficient and easy to use than similar products, and more than 95% of users recommend the product. The Handmaster Bella Comfort Flex gardening gloves are made with comfort flex technology and breathable nylon and are a great choice for all your gardening needs. The glove's water-repellent nylon helps keep your hands dry during messy garden tasks, while the double-coated nitrile palm gives you extra durability and grip. Their stylish but comfortable design also features a knitted wrist that helps prevent dirt from accumulating inside the gloves cuff. They are also available in three different sizes to help you find the perfect fit. At 1.92 ounces, these gloves are a great lightweight option to add to your tool shed. How we tested We bought three top-rated gardening tools that our reviewer tested in 25 hours. We asked our tester to consider the main features when using these tools, from the quality of the material to their effectiveness. We've outlined the main takeaways here so you also know what to look for when shopping. What to look for in a Gardening Tool Material Plastic is easy and easy to clean, but can break under stress. Metal lasts for a long time, but can rust without proper care. Metal tools also often have wooden handles that are attractive but can dry out over time. Grip Comfort If it's not comfortable to stick to a tool, you won't use it for long. Some handles are padded to provide more comfort and minimize blisters. Efficiency For shovels and trowel, look for a sharp edge and consider how the handle is attached to the head. If the shovel has a metal sleeve that wraps around the handle, make sure it is reinforced with a screw or rivet.
